FIRST VOTE ANNOUNCEMENT IN PIANO OWNING CONTEST

A Little Organization Among Your Friends for Sympathetic Work in Your Interest Will Go a Long Way Towards Making You the Winner of a Piano.

SELECT YOUR FAVORITE FROM THE LIST BELOW AND ASSIST HER TO

The vote announcement which appears below is the initial one Napanee Express Piano Owning Contest, and by the excellent list of and votes registered it is easily predicted that the competition will be equalled in this section of the province. Read over the names carefully see if your favorite is among the list.—If not simply clip the enrollment which appears on page 1, and send with name to Contest Manager. Enrollments will be received at any time during the competition and the names added to the list which appears each week in the paper.

If you are a subscriber to The Napanee Express surely you would give your renewal to one of the contestants, increasing her chances a hundred fold winning the Magnificent Newcombe $400.00 Piano.

TO THE CONTESTANTS.

Let everyone know that you are a candidate. Enlist the aid of friends and relatives. Have them clip out the coupon which appears in the issue of the paper and renew their subscription in your favor. Use your phone. Let everyone know you are a candidate before they promise to do so to a more enterprising candidate.

Be ambitious and determined to win. If you have friends you see at once, write to them. Blank letters will be furnished for this purpose upon request.

Votes are allowed in abundance on new subscriptions. Try and get a few new ones and you have paved a path to victory.

A little pebble thrown into the pond will disturb the whole surface of the water. So let it be with your efforts. Begin in your home town cause a ripple in every direction until the entire number of your friends and acquaintances are notified that you are a candidate in the Napanee Piano Owning Contest.

Put your memory to furnish you with a list of your acquaintances. Write them, phone them, call upon them, and solicit their aid. Get subscriptions and request them to intercede for you with their friends, and in turn pass it along, thus forming an endless chain as it were with you at the head as the incentive.

Of one thing be sure everyone approached will vote for someone, not that someone be you: Take up the matter in that light, believing in the right to a goodly share of help, and your list will grow and increase to an astonishing extent, but bear in mind this fact, that all subscriptions are cash.

And last, but not least, feel perfectly free to come to the Contest Manager for any assistance you may need. Remember also, time is the life of this contest, and the candidate who enters now, and works now and doubt and uncertainty behind, will come out with flying colors.

THAT FIRST SUBSCRIPTION.

The other candidate may profit by the experience of an experienced worker, and make reference to her plan and experience in the second subscription votes. The candidate referred to thought for a half hour and friends and acquaintances—made a list of them and marked the most likely one to help. No. 1—the next most likely, No. 2, and so on. Then she went to No. 1 and got his prepayment on a subscription, then to No. 2 and so on to the end of the day. In this way she managed to get a good list and also promises.

Do not despise these promises for they are important. Have pencil and paper to note the time you are told to call back and then back.

What is the moral: Go to the place of least resistance first, the place of next least resistance and after a while you will be so experienced in the art of getting back that you will not hesitate to go to the place of greatest resistance.

We don't want to brag too much, but we are so proud of this season's styles and designs that it is hard to refrain from the use of superlatives in describing it.

Do not despise these promises for they are important. Have pencil and paper to note the time you are told to call back and back.

What is the moral: Go to the place of least resistance first the place of next least resistance and after a while you will be so ex in the art of getting backers that you will not hesitate one moment requesting a subscription from anyone.

Another point about that first subscription—it may mean the votes and although someone has apparently cornered the single market before you, you can still, by leaps and bounds overtake them adds to enthusiasm.

ABSOLUTELY FAIR.

There is no unfair advantage possible to be taken in this contest one can come in and buy votes at wholesale either. Mere money count in the Contest that is conducted by the Napanee Express. All asked is "bona fide" subscriptions and their legitimate price in return.

Do not fear that you will not get a square deal and discourage about anything else, for since the world began there have always been tongues, and they never fail to assert themselves, yet "the truth is and will prevail."

A GOOD VOTE GETTER.

Three year renewals give a credit of 2000 votes, provided the tion is paid three years in advance. Should a subscription be one arrears, and a three dollar payment made, votes to amount of 150 allowed, since the subscription would be paid two years in advance should the same subscription be brought in with four dollars a credit votes will be allowed to date, and 2000 for the three advance making 2500 votes.

All votes received up to Thursday, April 18th, are counted in published below.

All particulars pertaining to vote getting, subscriptions, etc., explained in detail upon entering your name as a candidate.

"Well, he is not particularly well off. He has a small income, left him by his father, and he makes a little in some way on the Stock Exchange, I fancy; but I am not quite sure. Of course, I knew his father, but I had not seen Mr. Julian since he was a lad until the other day."

"Is he married?" asked Vane.

"No; oh, no! I asked him that question. By the way, Lord Lesborough, it is one I should like to ask you. I am under the impression that you are a bachelor."

Vane looked away to the window again.

"I have no wife," he said, gravely. Mr. Tressider nodded with almost obvious relief. For the moment, as Vane hesitated, he had dreaded that he should hear that the young earl had married—and probably beneath his present rank.

"Ah, yes, yes!" he murmured. "Plenty of time; though I trust I may have the pleasure of seeing a Countess of Lesborough before long."

Vane rose, but Mr. Tressider extended his hand appealingly.

"Oh, pray don't go yet, my lord," he said; "there are so many things I want to speak to you about, to arrange. And—er—perhaps the first subject is the important and inevitable one of—er—money. I do not know whether you need any at the present moment—you will excuse me?"

Vane smiled.

"I have a few shillings," he said.

Mr. Tressider nodded as if this were not the least satisfactory moment of the interview.

"Quite so; quite so! I will make arrangements—will pay a sum, as large as you please, into the bank this afternoon. Meanwhile, you will permit me to be your banker. Let me see, I have some notes and will not trouble you to cash a cheque!"

He went to the safe and from his cash box took out a little pile of notes, counted them and laid them on the table before Vane.

"There is a hundred and twenty pounds there, I think you will find. It is fortunate that I had just received a payment this morning. If that is not sufficient I will send a clerk to the bank—"

Vane smiled gravely.

"I shan't spend more than a hundred and twenty before to-morrow," he said.

As he spoke the door opened and the clerk brought in the usual piece of paper with a visitor's name written on it.

Mr. Tressider looked rather embarrassed.

"Strange coincidence!" he said. "It is Mr. Julian Shore. Ask Mr. Shore to kindly wait—"

Vane looked up quickly. "No, no, better earl than I shall, Mr. Shore."

"Oh, come, come!" murmured Mr. Shore, laughing softly. "Don't say that—and—we are cousins, aren't we? I hope you'll call me Julian!"

CHAPTER XI.

Would he call him "Julian?" Of course Vane was pleased by such good nature and magnanimity displayed by the man between whom and the prospect of an earldom he had stepped.

"Certainly—Julian," he said with so much lighter a tone in his voice that Mr. Tressider was surprised. "And of course you'll call me 'Vane'; we are cousins, as you say, and, though we haven't met before, I hope we shall be friends. I only heard of my good fortune last night, and I am a bit confused. I see it is lunch time. Mr. Tressider, will you let us off for an hour or two? I should like to go out and get something to eat with—Julian."

The old lawyer smiled, but rather ruefully, as he thought that the new earl was likely to be rather an erratic client.

"Oh, well!" he said, with a shrug of his shoulders. "I'll wire to Holland to say you may come to Lesborough at any moment, and I hope you will pay me a visit before long. There is much to be done, to be seen to."

"That's all right," responded Vane, serenely. "I'll leave everything in your hands, Mr. Tressider, and it will be sure to pan out perfectly." He pocketed the notes and Julian watched him with lowered lids.

The two young men went down the stairs and into the courtyard, where the pigeons fluttered and strode at their feet with the fearlessness of the London bird.

"Where shall we go?" asked Vane. "I used to have a club, but my subscription ran out, and I couldn't afford to renew it. Restaurant?"

Julian laughed—his laugh was as soft as his voice and his smile, soft and caressing.

"How strange to hear that from the Earl of Lesborough!" he said.

"Yes; but I wasn't earl then, and I was poor," said Vane.

Julian slowed up for a moment.

"I was going to lunch at my place," he said with a hesitation that was only momentary. "Perhaps you won't mind coming home with me? It's rather out of the way, though it isn't far from here. We shall be free to talk—"

"Right," said Vane. "I shall be very pleased."

Julian called a cab and gave the address—Vane did not catch it—to the cabman; and they drove across the way, I fancy it came from Lesborough Court."

"Then I hope there is there," said Vane. "You place?"

"No," replied Julian as the pate. "I have never been. My father and the earl, but no doubt, you know that. No, I have never been. But you know it; you have there?"

Vane nodded as he looked the room. It seemed strange able that he should be sitting cosily with this newly-disclosed sin.

"Yes; I used to go there and until recently I was a kind of regulation visit. earl quarrelled with me as relled with your father. He too much."

"As how?" asked Julian, glass.

"Oh, well, he wanted to direct my life. Wanted me politics and stand for the in the Conservative interest. "And you are a Liberal?" ed Julian.

"No, I'm not. I'm not declined to take my political lordship, and also declined come a—dependent. So and I went abroad—"

His away.

"And were wrecked?" so interrogatively.

Vane seemed to dry up, on the moment.

"Yes," he said, absently us talk of something else, self. I could almost have possible to be sorry that I when you came into Mr. just now."

Julian's dark face flushed ment and his lids drooped looked like ask when

"Strange coincidence!" he said. "It is Mr. Julian Shore. Ask 'Mr. Shore to kindly wait—"

Vane looked up quickly. "No, no. Will you let him come in? I should like to see him."

Mr. Tressider nodded and the clerk went out and ushered in a tall, thin young man with a remarkably handsome face and a graceful bearing. He was almost as dark as a typical Spaniard, with eyes that were well nigh black, and screened by long silky lashes.

As he entered, he looked from the lawyer—still rather embarrassed—to Vane; then his eyes fell on the sheaf of notes, and the black orbs seemed to deepen suddenly, swiftly, but in an instant the fleeting expression had vanished and given place to one of courteous curiosity.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Tressider," he said in a singularly soft and low voice. "I did not know you were engaged."

"Pray take a seat, Mr. Shore," said Mr. Tressider. "You have called at a most auspicious—" the word seemed rather inappropriate, not to say heartless, and he paused and stumbled in search of a better, but failed to find one, and so gave up the idea of "breaking" the news to the next heir and blurted out the introduction.

"I must make you two gentlemen known to each other. Mr. Shore, this is Mr. Mannerling—tut, tut! I mean Lord Lesborough."

Vane, with a feeling of pity and sympathy, was watching the man whose hopes he was destroying, and he saw the polite look of inquiry, doubt and then dismay and pain which passed over the dark, handsome face. The lids fell over the dark eyes, as if their owner desired to hide them.

"Lord—Lesborough!" fell from his lips, which had grown almost white. "Lord Lesborough! Then—then—"

"Exactly!" put in Mr. Tressider, as the soft voice broke and fell away. "Mr. Mannerling was not lost in the Alpina. He was rescued and has only just returned to London; has indeed only been here with me a few minutes. Of course, I should have let you know—"

It was an awkward, a trying moment for both the young men. Vane felt as if he had been guilty of inexcusable meanness in not getting drowned; and with a flush and a frown he rose and held out his hand.

"I'm sorry—" he began, then he shrugged his shoulders. What could he say?

But Julian Shore had recovered from the shock, and rising instantly he took Vane's strong, firm hand in his soft, white one; a smile glittered in his eyes and curved his rather thin lips, and the low, musical voice said:

"And you are the new earl! Well!"—he drew a quick, short breath, then he shrugged his shoulders—"we can't both have the title, and—Lord Lesborough, I assure you that I am heartily glad that you are alive!"

Nothing could have been better done; and Vane, feeling if anything still more guilty and ashamed of his existence, gripped gratefully the white hand of the disappointed man.

"Thanks," he said. "Thanks! I'm almost sorry that I didn't go down with the ship. You'd have made a very pleased."

Julian called a cab and gave the address—Vane did not catch it—to the cabman; and they drove across the Strand and alongside the House of Parliament to an old-fashioned row of houses facing the river.

Vane, as they alighted, looked round him curiously. It was a bit of old London hemmed in and flanked by newly-built flats and modern residences.

"Quaint place," he said. "I've never been here before."

"No? I live here because it's quiet and out of the way; and I own the house. It was my father's. It's rather a nice view, especially at night, with the lights on the water. The house is old, very old, and it wants repairing, modernizing and all that, and I mean to do it—when I can afford it."

He pulled at an old-fashioned bell and the door was opened presently, and with an air of caution, by an old woman with so strange an expression on so pallid a face, that Vane could not help staring at her; and he stared the harder when, instead of speaking, Julian Shore made signs to her in the deaf and dumb alphabet on his fingers.

The old woman took her eyes for a moment from her master's face to glance at Vane, then nodded assentingly, and closing the door disappeared through another which led to the basement.

"Come upstairs, will you?" said Julian. "I live on the upper floor for the sake of the view."

He led the way into a sitting-room which was as old-fashioned as the exterior of the house. The walls were of oak, blackened by age—not Tottenham Court Road varnish—there was a massive mantelpiece as black as the panelling, and the furniture, old and heavy, was in perfect harmony with the room. There was a piano, also of oak. It was a very quaint room, and imposing, but it struck Vane as sombre, not to say weird.

He went to the window and looked out.

"You've a fine view of the river," he said, "and this is a grand old room."

As he spoke he noticed a faint smell like that emitted by pungent chemicals. It came from a door leading out of the room, and Julian stepped to it and closed it softly.

The old woman appeared with a tray and presently set out a nice little lunch of sweetbreads, pate-de-foie gras, Swiss cheese, and a blanc-mange. The claret was in a Venetian flask, and a small bottle of yellow Chartreuse stood beside it. Having laid out the table, the woman, after a fixed look at her master—the kind of look one sees in the eyes of a well-trained and devoted spaniel—left the room, and Julian drew a chair to the table for Vane and invited him to be seated.

"You seem to have very comfortable quarters," said Vane. "Your servant is deaf and dumb, isn't she?"

"Yes," said Julian. "She was an old servant of my father's. I'm afraid to say how old she is. But she is very faithful and attentive, and serves my purpose."

"And you don't mind her—affliction?" said Vane as he helped himself to sweetbread.

Julian smiled.

"No," he replied. "I suppose it's because I'm used to her. She is very intelligent, and, as I say, she is devoted to me."

"She looks it," remarked Vane. "This is splendid claret."

Julian smiled, the smile of a man whose wine is praised.

"It is some my father left me. By just now." Julian's dark face flushed and his lids drooped looked like a mask, when were closed, so expressive—then he raised them, shrugged his shoulders, his hands with a gesture minded Vane of his cousin blood.

"That's very kind and you—Vane," he said, with pause before the "Vane." "I should have liked to have Earl of Lesborough; but perhaps I shall be as happy were."

"I dare say," said Vane blunt way. "I don't stuff a sigh—"that it will any the happier."

Julian looked at him with curiosity. "Oh, you!" he can imagine that you will a typical English nobleman cut out for the position a it well. While I—he wave hands again—"I'm scarcely a subject. I'm only fish. My mother was a Spaniard. I have nothing—what do you—feudal about me. You would perhaps you are already yes?" he broke off, his almond eyes on Vane's with a frank and disinterested gation.

Vane filled his glass and he had replied to Mr. Tressider. "I have no wife."

"Ah, but you soon will," said Julian, smilingly. "You a great catch. The party son. You know that you mendously rich as well as."

Vane nodded. "So I understand," he said. "But I am married."

"Never is a long time," said Julian with a smile. "Chartreuse, will you? It from the Lesborough cell lieve. You will go down once, will you not?"

Vane filled his liquor glass so. "he answered, slowly with his characteristic air said: "See here, Julian. A up in this fashion must be inconvenient to you. I—I make it up to you, in some upon my life I don't quite, to. Do you mind telling me, thing about yourself, means?" He faltered and the table and round the wall though weird and rather room. "I don't want to pl quisitive business you know Julian laughed at his embarrassment.

"You have a particularly fine mind, my dear Vane," his soft voice. "I know exactly you are going to do. You to offer to—make it up to loss of my expectations. so?"

"That's about hit it," Vane in his direct fashion.

"I thought so!" said Julian his charmingly candid smile would offer me an allowance come—"

"That's so," assented Vane shouldn't I? I'm immensely rich, I believe, and if I had up you would have been the Lesborough."

As he pronounced the title Shore's lids quivered, but it was still hovering about his "As it is," went on Vane, the next in succession, the shan't marry—you shake your but I know what I am saying you will come into it a shouldn't you accept an allowance, from me? "You are an awful fool," put in Vane in his blunt way.

"Perhaps. But I have a small but sufficient income; enough for a bachelor, and I value my independence. No! I refuse your money; but—but if you offer your friendship, your affection, may I say—"

Vane extended his hand.

"Put it that way," he said, gravely. "Blood is thicker than water. See here, we will go down to Les borough-to-morrow. I as the earl and master, you as the heir apparent—I think that's the way they describe it. We'll be friends, Julian—What of earth is that peculiar scent, odor which hangs about this room?" he broke off to enquire.

Julian looked round absently, then smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

"I am rather fond of dabbling in chemistry. My father had a like taste; it was one of the reasons for his rupture with the late earl. His Lordship could not understand how a Mannering could interest himself in such a commonplace subject. I use the room next this as a kind of laboratory. Come and see."

He arose and going to the door opened it and stood aside for Vane to enter.

Vane looked in. It was a small room lighted by a window with a screen of yellow silk. There was a strange looking fireplace with crucibles and retorts, and there were tables and shelves on which were books and chemical apparatus.

Vane glanced round with faint interest; he was not scientific by any state of mind. He felt drawn towards his cousin; blood is thicker than water; and Vane had been touched by the way in which Julian had accepted his disappointment and had proffered his friendship to the man who had crushed his hopes of a peerage. But there was something about Julian—his weird place of abode, his taste for chemistry, and indifference to the awful odor arising from his experiments—which jarred upon Vane, something in the expression of his dark eyes, the sudden drooping of the lids, which militated against the favorable impression created by the handsome face and graceful form.

Vane shrugged his shoulders.

"I'm a fanciful beast; and my nerves are rags," he said to himself. "Anyway, I've got to make the best of him. He's the only relative I know, and he'll be the next earl; I shall never marry. I'll make a friend of him, treat him as the heir."

The reflection sent him off on the old track, and as he strode along he thought of Nina. Though he was convinced that she had been lost, he had, for weeks after his arrival in London, sought amongst the shipping companies for tidings of a cast-away, but, chancing to miss the owners of the Island Queen, he did not hear of the picking up of the girl tied to a portion of a raft. Yes, she was dead, and he had been spared that he might spend the remainder of his life in futile remorse and regret.

Quite heedless of the direction in which he was going, he sauntered on, and presently, awaking from his reverie, he found himself in Piccadilly, at the entrance to Hyde Park. He turned in absently and strolled towards the Row. It was the fashionable hour of the day and the place was crowded, and Vane lit another of tobacco cigars and leaning on the "Rum fancy," he remarked. "What's the good of it?" Julian shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, I don't know. Not much, I suppose. But it amuses me. Now you, I imagine, go in for sport?"

Vane nodded. "Yes; sport of any and every kind. If I remember rightly, there was not much hunting or shooting at Lesborough."

"The late earl starved it—so Mr. Tressider said."

"Quite so. Well, I'll alter that, at any rate," said Vane. "What's that thing on the fire? I fancy it's that that smells so?"

Julian Shore lifted a steel pot or kettle from the slowly-burning fire. "Oh, only an experiment," he said.

He led the way back to the sitting-room. "Are you fond of music?" he asked in a casual way. "I'm no performer, but I'm a splendid listener. You play, or sing? Let's hear you!"

Julian pushed a cigar cabinet to Vane, then, with a gesture of apology, and self-depreciation, went to the piano and struck a prelude of chords and sang.

Vane listened with rapt attention and admiration.

"My dear fellow, you're almost good enough for grand opera!" he said. "You've got a devil of a voice!"

"My motner sang well, I believe," said Julian, modestly.

Vane, who was as sensitive to music as a cobra, heaved a sigh; for the soft, dulcet strain had brought back the island to him. "I must be going. My friends, the Letchfords—I'm staying with them—will wonder what the devil has become of me. Well, it's fixed; you and I go down to Lesborough to-morrow. What's the train, do you know?"

Julian knew. Had he not looked it up in Bradshaw when he thought he should be the next earl?

"Ten-fifty," he said, "from Waterloo."

Vane held out his hand and gripped the soft, white one warmly.

"Right. We'll go down together."

Julian accompanied him to the door and stood there watching the stalwart figure as it strode away. Then he mounted to the sitting-room. The old woman was clearing the luncheon things, and she stopped and looked at her master questioningly.

But he mentioned to her to go, and sinking into a chair leaned his hand-some head on his hand.

Presently his thin, crimson lips moved, and he murmured:

"Only him between me and an earldom, between me and wealth—wealth! And he is not married. A young man like myself. Only him! If anything were to happened to him— But it won't. He'll live to be ninety. It's just like my luck, to be within an ace of a peerage and miss it. I feel like cursing him for all his good-natured offer of friendship. But cursing wouldn't kill him. If it would—" turned in absently and strolled towards the Row. It was the fashionable hour of the day and the place was crowded, and Vane lit another of Julian's cigars and, leaning on the rail, surveyed the riders as they passed him. The walk was thronged with promenaders; and little groups of friends and acquaintances were chatting and laughing together, making a pleasant little hum and buzz which, pleasant as it was, made Vane feel very lonely.

There came a hissing sound from the laboratory, as if something were boiling over, and he sprang to his feet and ran eagerly into the next room, as if he had forgotten Vane and the lost earldom.

Some of the voices were so distinct that they reached his ear. He listened mechanically and heard a man who was talking with some ladies say:

"Yes, she's just gone past. Looks wonderfully well, and fit, doesn't she?"

"It's the first time she has put in an appearance since his death, isn't it? What a terrible blow and—disappointment it must have been to her! Think of missing being a marchioness! And so narrowly! Most girls would have been utterly crushed."

"But not she," drawled the man. "She's a good plucked one. Yes, she's missed the marquises, but I shouldn't wonder if she goes for a duke next time. There she is again."

HOT FLASHES.

Women in middle age often complain of hot flashes. They are at that stage of life—when their delicate organism needs a tonic and helping-hand which only Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can give them. Many women suffer needlessly from girlhood to womanhood and from motherhood to old age—with backache, dizziness or headache. A woman often becomes sleepless, nervous, "broken-down," irritable and feels tired from morning to night. When pains and aches rack the womanly system at frequent intervals, ask your neighbor about Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Mrs. J. IMHOF, of 321 S. Denton Street, Baltimore, Md., says: "I wrote you about nine months ago, telling you of my condition. I have a fine baby girl—she weighed nine pounds when born. She is my third child and the strongest of them all. My suffering was only for two hours. I took several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of Dr. Pierce's Smart-Weed. I never had a well day before I took your medicines. I was surprised how well I felt—could eat—was always hungry, and never had a sick stomach. The nurse who was with me said the medicine was wonderful because I got along so nicely after having had so much trouble before. She intends to recommend it to all her suffering patients. Everybody is astonished at me because I only weighed 102 pounds before and now I weigh 135. I have had several ladies come to me and ask about Dr. Pierce's medicine. I am willing to recommend it to all who suffer and want help. If any want information I will be glad to give it to them."

For the Farmer Who Thinks.

Hard wood ashes contain from 1 to 10 per cent potash and considerable lime. Save all of your hard wood ashes and apply to the soil.

Most farm homes are seriously lacking in proper ventilation, especially in winter, when every one cares more for the warmth of the room than for the purity of the air in it.

Make all needed improvements at the barn. See to it that the barn is comfortable for the animals during cold weather. You cannot afford to waste feed in trying to keep up animal heat when the animals are exposed to severe weather.

FIRST PRINTER'S DEVIL.

He Was a Young Negro Slave Employed by Aldus Manutius.

Aldus Manutius, who in 1488 set up his office in Venice, has long been famous as the first of the publishers of the famous Aldine classics, which today are so highly prized by book collectors. He was the author of a Latin grammar, a Greek dictionary and a treatise on the metrical methods of the poet Horace and originated the form of type known by us as Italic and by German printers as "cursive" type.

He is also said to be responsible for the name of "printer's devil," almost worldwide in its application to the youngest boy in the office. A young negro slave employed in his office who was so very black and dirty that his natural ugliness had become an almost fiendish expression became feared and known all over Venice as "the little black devil," and Manutius at last realized that the boy and himself had dangerously awakened the superstitious fears and dislike of the more ignorant Venetians. He accordingly formally exhibited him during a whole day on the public streets and had the criers make this proclamation throughout the city:

"I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the holy church and the doge, have this day made public exposure of the printer's devil. All who think he is not flesh and blood may come and prick him."

PRESS COMMENTS.

Belleville Ontario:—A correspondent propounds this query: "Had Mr. Rowell moved to 'Abolish treating' would Sir James not have moved to 'Abolish the bar?'"

Ottawa Journal:—Now that one Provincial party has adopted the slogan "Abolish the bar," and the other party is meeting this with "Abolish the treating habit," the temperance people of Ontario must realize that they are having their innings.

Kingston Standard:—The man who can invent some safety device by which gas will be shut off automatically so as to prevent death from asphyxiation will deserve the thanks of the world. Toronto has just had two more deaths from suffocation by gas. Toronto gas seems specially deadly.

Victor Colonist:—There is no use of attempting, as some do, to dispose of these questions between employers and employed by hard words. To us it seems as if the greatest aim of statesmanship at the present time ought to be to discover how it may be possible to prevent the necessity of strikes or lockouts.

Toronto Globe—The Kingston Standard, a good Tory paper, advises the Western farmers to stick to Manitoba hard. To begin mixed farming now, it says, would be financial suicide. The Standard will have to supplement that advice by resuming its arguments in favor of wider markets for Canadian wheat. If Mr. Borden is in power for even three years he will not be able to evade that issue.

London Advertiser:—Mr. Morine attempts to make a virtue out of resignation, but no doubt he has chosen the easier way. The inquisition will go on without him, and the Canadian people will be less interested in Mr. Morine's history and fate than in the fact that the Government, knowing his record before Mr. Carvell exposed it to the public gaze, saw in it no disqualification. The selection of such a partisan for the work is a hint of what the commission is expected to do.

EARNED HIS PROMOTION

DUNCAN MACPHERSON is R. W. LEONARD'S DEPUTY.

Capable Engineer of the National Transcontinental Has Spent Six Years In Charge of the Work and Knows It From A to Z—He is Widely Known as an Engineer, Surveyor and Inventor.

Duncan Macpherson, who has recently been appointed assistant to R. W. Leonard, chairman of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission, is one of the best known civil engineers of the Dominion and he has been assistant to the chief engineer of the commission for some six years so that he is thoroughly familiar with all the details of the big railway undertaking.

His promotion is an important one, however, and means that during the absence of the chairman that he will have complete control of the work of this important department. The position is a new one but Chairman Leonard desires to make the commission more efficient and to allow him to have more time to attend to important work outside of headquarters, he desires an assistant with thorough knowledge of the details and in Duncan Macpherson he feels certain that he has such a man. The new assistant chairman of the National Transcontinental Railway was born at Bath in 1853 and comes of United Empire Loyalist parentage. He was educated at Napanee High School and the Royal Military College, Kingston, graduating from the latter in June, 1880, standing head of the class in civil engineering, and taking high honors in several other subjects and being the winner of Lord Lorne's silver medal for general proficiency. for the work is a hint of what the commission is expected to do.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review :—An esteemed Toronto contemporary complains that quite a few foolish people are quitting that city and the world at the same time by "turning on the gas." Of course they are foolish people; but probably they have live so long in Toronto that they have come to think there is no place else, and that in order to get out of it is necessary to quit the world. That is one of the dangers of living in Toronto.

Christian Guardian—A 70 per cent. minority against union is, of course, too large to be ignored. If the vote in the Presbyterian Church should finally show so large a number opposed to union very serious thought will have to be given to the matter before further steps toward consummation are taken. But we think that those who have been assuring us in the public press during the past few weeks that Church union was dead and buried, have spoken a little too hastily. The vast majority of the members of the three churches are evidently prepared for church union and there seems no good reason why its consummation should not be a matter of only a few years at the longest.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill.

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a disease part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co. and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage), Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

was the original of 18 students entering at the inception of the college in 1876 and has been known ever since as the "old eighteen." In November, 1880, he was employed as rodman on the surveys for the extension of the Canada Central, which in 1881 was merged into the C.P.R. He remained on location and construction for the C.P.R. for several years and in various capacities and was subsequently given the position of resident engineer on maintenance of way and construction of branch lines, starting with a territory of about 400 miles. He was afterwards promoted to division engineer with duties and responsibilities continually increasing until he was given charge of the whole eastern division, comprising 1,500 miles of main track.

He resigned from the C.P.R. in 1905 after serving some 25 years with that corporation and accepted the position of assistant chief engineer of the National Transcontinental Railway, a position he has held with marked ability until his recent promotion as assistant chairman of the commission with a seat at the board and ranking next in authority to the chairman.

He holds a certificate as a Dominion land surveyor, and an Ontario land surveyor, and is a life member of the English Institute of Civil Engineers, and a charter member of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, and he is also a member of the American Railway Engineering Association. He is a past president of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers and is at present a member of the council of that body, having been recently elected to that office for the 14th time, a unique honor in the history of the association. He is also noted as the inventor of the Macpherson safety switch and frog, which gives a solid continuous main line and which is in use in Canada, the United States and Australia and some of these frogs have been in use on the C.P.R. for 14 years without renewal.

ONE CROP FOLLY.

The evils of one crop agriculture are not to be measured in the immediate present, but in our declining years or when we turn over a wornout farm to our children. The vast cotton fields of the south and the wheat fields of the north and west bear mute but emphatic witness of the suicidal policy of adhering to but one crop.—Kansas Farmer.

Grade Seed Grain Early.

Do not wait until spring to clean and grade your seed grain. Do it now, while you have plenty of grain at hand from which to select. The best twenty-five bushels of grain out of a hundred bushels are worth much more for seed than is the grain that can be cleaned from a much smaller amount in the spring. The cost of this cleaning and grading the grain is very slight, and it enables one to have heavy, plump seed grain at very little outlay.—Exchange.

Widely-Known Teacher of English in Ottawa's Collegiate Institute Has Had a Brilliant Career Since He Entered the University—Is a Pioneer of the Canadian Club Idea and a Charter Member.

William John Sykes, professor of English literature at the Ottawa Collegiate Institute, has been appointed public librarian of Ottawa.

He is a specialist in languages and one of the most successful and popular teachers that has ever taught in the collegiate there. His resignation will be a great loss to the school, but his knowledge of books and literature and good judgment will be an invaluable asset to the Carnegie Public Library of the capital. For about 13 years he has been identified with the work of the Ottawa Collegiate and during that time he has won the respect and esteem of both pupils and teachers and has filled a large place in the hearts of all the citizens of the capital who take a deep interest in the progress of higher education. Every pupil attending the collegiate felt that in the head English teacher ed them to earnest effort and directed their minds to what is noblest and best in English literature. His departure will be felt as a personal loss by each pupil and will be sincerely regretted by the whole teaching staff, with whom he is also a general favorite.

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Prof. Sykes was born at Cobourg, Ont., about 47 years ago and moved when quite a young man with his parents to Campbellford, Ont. He attended the public and high schools in the latter town and subsequently entered Victoria College at Toronto University and graduated with honors in English, French, German and Italian, being gold medallist of his year. While at the university he took a very active part in college life and was editor for a time of the paper Acta Victoriana. After graduation he entered the teaching profession and was engaged as teacher of English and moderns at the Cobourg Collegiate Institute, where he remained one year. He next became head of the English department at the Hamilton Collegiate Institute and was there two years before coming to Ottawa a teacher in the collegiate there.

With Sanford Evans, ex-mayor of Winnipeg, he was one of the originators of the Canadian Club idea and helped the latter gentleman and others to form the first Canadian Club in Hamilton, of which he was a charter member. Prof. Sykes is also a charter member of the Ottawa Canadian Club. He is a very earnest and enthusiastic student of English literature and is a very successful lecturer on literary subjects. In the collegiate institute at Ottawa he has constantly used his influence to promote the Lyceum and particularly in encouraging the students to read essays and take part in debates.

ARCTIC INDIAN LIFE.

A Heroic Mother and Her Reward When Her Son Was Grown.

In "The Arctic Prairies," by Ernest Thompson Seton, a gruesome picture of Indian life is given in the following incident:

"One winter, forty or fifty years ago, a band of Algonquin Indians at Wabimika all starved to death except one squaw and her baby. She fled from the camp, carrying the child, thinking to find friends and help at Nipigon House. She got as far as a small lake near Deer lake and there discovered a cache, probably in a tree. This contained one small bone fishhook. She rigged up a line, but had no bait.

"The wailing of the baby spurred her to action. No bait, but she had a knife. A strip of flesh was quickly cut from her own leg, a hole made through the ice, and a fine jackfish was the food that was sent to this devoted mother. She divided it with the child, saving only enough for bait. She stayed there living on fish until spring, then safely rejoined her people.

"The boy grew up to be a strong man, but was cruel to his mother, leaving her finally to die of starvation. Anderson knew the woman. She showed him the scar where she cut the bait."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

STANDING FIELD CROP COMPETITIONS.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

The Ontario Government has this year placed in the estimates a grant of $18,000 for Standing Field Crop Competitions to be conducted under the auspices of Boards of Agricultural Societies. Of the above amount the Federal Government have agreed to reimburse the Province to the extent of $1,000 for each million of acres of cultivated land up to $10,000.

1. NATURE OF THE COMPETITION. Competition in every Society will be limited to one crop which should be the one of most importance to the farmers of the district. Fields entered for competition must consist of not less than five acres nor more than twenty, but for beans or potatoes the minimum plot must not be less than one acre.

Selection must be made from the following crops, viz: Spring or Fall wheat, white oats, barley, rye, corn, peas, alsike, clover, alfalfa, potatoes, beans or any other staple crop produced for seed in Ontario.

2. COMPETITORS. Competition will be limited to members of an Agricultural Society and the fields entered must be not more than fifteen miles from headquarters. Competitors will be allowed to make entry in only one society, and but one entry can be made by each competitor.

3. SOCIETY'S ENTRY. Societies desiring to enter this competition must notify the Superintendent not later than the first of May. Not less than ten entries in any Society will be accepted, and competition will be limited to the first hundred and seventy Societies applying.

4. INDIVIDUAL ENTRIES. All individual entries must be forwarded by the Secretaries to the Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, on or before May 25th 1912.

5. Societies may, if thought advisable, charge a small entry fee of not more than one dollar, but this is optional with the directors.

An amount of not less than $75 will be given in prizes by each Society, to be divided as follows:—$20, $15, $12, $10, $8, $6, $4.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
April 15th, 1912.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. T. Waller in the chair.

Present—Reeve Alexander and Councillors Madill, Osborne, Carson, Dickinson and Denison.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

Coun. Simpson entered.

Some correspondence which had taken place between the town officials and the Grand Trunk Railway Co., in reference to the proposed changes in the railway bridge crossing the river at the east end of the town was laid before the council by the clerk. He also laid upon the table a blue print of the proposed changes.

Ordered left in the hands of the Mayor and Clerk to deal with.

The Clerk also laid before the council a couple of communications from the Board of Railway Commissioners which set forth the fact that neither the C.N.R., nor the G.T.R., had filed with the Board of Railway Commissioners any plans of proposed changes in their present lines.

These communications were ordered filed.

A communication was read from the C.P.R. officials, in reply to a request from Napanee that they touch at this point when building their new line through this section, stating that to divert from the plans already made for their lines would necessitate the building of several miles of track not provided for in their plans, but when the road had been advanced further they would take up the matter of making connections with Napanee.

A communication was read from Mr. H. Taylor claiming an amount of $10.50 for excessive charge for electric current used in lighting one of his traveller's sample rooms. Recently the Seymour Power Co., employees discovered that the meter was faulty, and was given to what is known as "creeping," thereby registering when the current was not being used. The present company allowed him a rebate averaging thirty cents per month, and now Mr. Taylor is asking for a like refund from the town which dates back to the time the meter was first installed.

On motion of Councillors Dickinson and Carson the communication was ordered filed.

TENDERS.

The following tenders were received and disposed of:

Care of Harvey Warner Park for season—W. F. Morris offered to do the work for $110; W. B. Johnston, the matter of having the C. P. R. touch Napanee when their new line is built through this section. The two gentlemen above referred to are located at Montreal, and if given the authority, they would make it a point to interview the C. P. R. officials in that city and use their best endeavors to have the wish of the municipality gratified in this respect.

Moved by Coun. Osborne, seconded by Coun. Madill, that Mr. W. C. Scott and Mr. Collis be given the necessary authority, as representatives from this municipality, to interview the C. P. R. officials at Montreal in reference to having that railway connect with Napanee when their new line is being built through this section. Carried.

Moved by Reeve Alexander, seconded by Coun. Denison, that the Bay of Quinte Railway Co., be paid the sum of $600 for property purchased from them for factory site for The Napanee Iron Works Co., Limited. Carried.

Coun. Madill reported that Mr. Geo. Grieve had been paid the sum of $40 for work which had been done on the property which he held in lease, and which the town had purchased as a site for The Napanee Iron Works Co., Limited. The committee, upon investigation, found the amount asked for very moderate indeed.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Osborne, that this council proceed at once with the construction of a disposal works under plan prepared by Engineer Wright, and approved by the Provincial Board of Health. Carried.

Moved by Reeve Alexander, seconded by Coun. Osborne, that a deed, authorized by the by-law, be executed by the proper officers of the town, and transferred to The Napanee Iron Works Co., Limited, for their factory site. Carried.

Concerning Women.

Miss Louise F. Brown, an instructor at Wellesley college, is the first woman to receive the Herbert Baxter Adams prize of $200 offered every two years by the American Historical association for the best essay on European history. Miss Brown's essay was one of a very large number submitted by representatives of many leading colleges throughout the country.

The Countess of Warwick is planning a lecture tour in the United States and Canada, for which she has prepared three subjects. One deals with woman suffrage and the other two are on communism and celebrities she has met.

Miss Harriet Keeler has recently been appointed superintendent of schools in Cleveland, O. A woman is tenement inspector in that city, having charge of the sanitary policeman; a woman is assistant librarian, a woman has charge of outdoor relief, two women are on the school board, one having been elected clerk, making six important positions filled by women in a city which two years ago had but one woman in public office, a member of the board of education.

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denver, ex-president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and a possibility as United States senator, in a recent interview said that a woman's party is under consideration in Colorado, as they have found both of the old political parties permeated with corruption.

In the afternoon of Thursday first paper will be by Mr. George Dolan of Kingston on "Ki Share in the War of 1812." It will be a subject of keen interest. Mr. Dolan is a comparatively new in Ontario Historical Society. He is a great student of History and is doing some valuable research work.

The second paper a "Review of the War of 1812" by Castell Hopkins of Toronto will be in concise form the events of the war. Mr. Hopkins has for years done much work on historical lines. His "Canadian annual Review" is used as a standard publication in every Canadian library, both public and private must own.

Dr. James H. Coyne of St. Catharines, another past president of the Historical Society, will give the paper of the afternoon session. He recalls "The Result of the War of 1812." Dr. Coyne's work in the historical field is also very well known. His work as translator and editor of "Exploration of the Great Lakes" by Dollier de Caron and de la Potherie, which appeared in volume four of the Ontario Historical Society's publications, was most valuable and commented upon everywhere. Dr. Coyne is also a local historical matter, having written a splendid paper on "The Exploration of the Great Lakes" which was published in volume five of the Society's "Papers and Records."

At four o'clock on the afternoon of the delegates and friends invited to attend a garden party given at the residence of Mr. Lawren.

In the evening Mr. Lawren, late librarian of the Library at Ottawa and at present occupying the most important position of Secretary of the new International Joint Commission, will give a paper on "The Effect of the War of 1812 on the Settlement of the Canadian West."

Mr. George Andrews of Ili writes:

"For many years I have been with chronic Constipation. I never comes single-handed have been a victim to the man that constipation brings in. Medicine after medicine I have ordered to find relief, but one or me in the same hopeless condition seemed that nothing would cure me the one ailment that caused trouble, yet at last I read about Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for I was so impressed with the results made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stools. I am cured of constipation. I claim they have no equal as a cure."

For over half a century Dr. Indian Root Pills have been a cure for constipation and clogged, inactive bowels. With all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the bowels and purify the blood. Sold at 25c, a box.

I have a full line of SPRAYING MACHINES and Spraying Chemicals

Dr. W. L. Grant, Professor of Queen's University, and Mr. C. C. James, a Napanee, who, by his untiring labors, has made such remarkable Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, Ontario and who has received a most important post, in the field, from the Dominion of the afternoon of Thursday the 11th will be by Mr. George K. Kingston on "Kingston's War of 1812." This will be of keen interest locally, as is a comparatively new man in the Historical Society work. A great student of Canadian history is doing some valuable research. On paper a "Review of the War of 1812" by Mr. J. J. Perkins of Toronto will recall to the events of this war. Perkins has for years done splendid work on historical lines and his annual "Review" is recognized as a standard publication which the Napanee library, both public and private must own. Mr. H. Coyne of St. Thomas, President of the Ontario Historical Society, will give the last of the afternoon session on which he has written the "Result of the War of 1812." Coyne's work in the Canadian history is also very well known. He is also a translator and editor of the "History of the Great Lakes 1639-1763" by De la Potherie de Carson and De Breteuil, which appeared as one of the Ontario Historical Society's publications, was most favorably commented upon when it appeared. Dr. Coyne is also authority on historical matters, having written a splendid paper on the "Discovery of the Bay of James" which was published in volume of the Society's "Papers and Proceedings."

At 6 o'clock on the same afternoon delegates and friends are invited to attend a garden party to be held at the residence of Mr. Herring.

Evening Mr. Lawrence J. Burroughs, librarian of the Carnegie Library at Ottawa and at present occupies the most important position in the history of the new International Commission, will give a paper on the "Effect of the War of 1812 on the Canadian West."

OF CONSTIPATION

Andrews praises Dr. Ross's Indian Root Pills.

George Andrews of Halifax, N. S.,

for many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment comes single-handed, and I am a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. After medicine I have taken in vain for relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It was not until I read about these Indian Root Pills.

It was indeed a lucky day for me, as I was so impressed with the statement made that I determined to try a fair trial. I have regulated my stomach and I am cured of constipation, and I have no equal as a medicine.

For half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, the ailments which result from the impure blood. Sold everywhere.

Our readers will note that this day has been devoted to the history of the War of 1812, the hundredth anniversary of which will thus be fittingly recognized. These papers which will cover subjects in a different manner from any yet attempted, will each take only twenty to thirty minutes to read but they will add materially to the Ontario Historical Society collection.

An interesting exhibit of a portion of the valuable collection of war relics which has been made by Mr. Alexander Clark Casselman of North Bay, Ont., will be another feature of this meeting. Mr. Casselman is unable to attend in person but has promised to send a portion of his collection for exhibition during the meetings. He expects to have a list of all his material ready to send here and is taking a keen interest in the program to be presented. Mr. Casselman has without question the best collection of such material in Canada.

On Friday, June 7th, a trip will be made by steamer Brockville down the Napanee river and Quinte Bay when a visit will be made to the original landing place of the United Empire Loyalists who settled the Midland district. On the return a run into Hay Bay will give the visitors a glimpse of the first Methodist church built in Upper Canada and the first Canadian home of Sir John A. McDonald. This outing will be complimentary to all of the visitors.

The local committee is making plans to entertain all of the delegates at private homes and with the second edition of the program, which will be sent out sometime in May, careful instructions will be given which will explain to all delegates how to advise the local committee of their intention to visit Napanee at that time. We are told that a gratifying number of residents in Napanee have already requested the privilege of entertaining delegates.

BETTER PRICES PAID

In United States For The Hay Grown

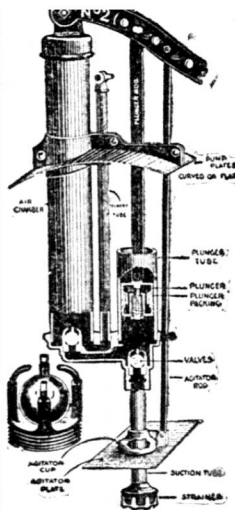

The hay grown in the counties of Frontenac, Lennox, Hastings and Adirondack, according to a statement made by F. S. S. Johnson, American consul at this port, realizes better prices in the American markets than that grown elsewhere in Canada. The value of hay exported from Kingston and vicinity for the six months ending March 31st, 1912, amounted to $137,000.

The exportation of hay from Canada to the United States has increased greatly in the last two or three years, and during the ten months ended January 31st, 1912, amounted to 516,361 tons, valued at $3,883,155. The provinces furnishing this hay were as follows: Quebec, 365,182 tons; Ontario, 142,819 tons; New Brunswick, 7,051 tons; Prince Edward Island, 1,245 tons; Nova Scotia, 56 tons; and Yukon, 5 tons.

During the same period the United States exported 14,573 tons, valued at $537,272, to Canada, most of this going to British Columbia and the Yukon territory.

As stated, the better quality of hay is grown in this part of Ontario and sells for $12 to $16 a ton on the local market. With the freight, duty and profits of the various dealers, the consumer in the United States must pay $25 to $30 a ton.

We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

FORESIGHT ON FRUIT FARM.

Useful Hints on Keeping Busy During Otherwise Idle Season.

The fruit grower is often confronted by the problem of providing profitable labor for his employees during the winter. Without cattle or other live stock on the place it is often hard to provide such work. Since good help is becoming more scarce each year on the fruit farms, it means a good deal to be able to hold laborers over from one season to another.

On the farm which is so fortunate as to be provided with a small workshop many days may be profitably spent in repairing and oiling the harnesses, making orchard whiffletrees, painting and repairing all the tools, wagons and farm machinery. All spraying machinery should be completely overhauled for the coming season. The packing of all the pumps should be renewed. The engine should be thoroughly examined, all the badly worn parts should be replaced, and it should be oiled well to prevent rusting. Much time is lost by farmers during the rush of spring work through failure to overhaul their machinery during the winter. All the small tools should also be carefully examined. Axes, scythes, mowers, hoes, shovels, etc., should be repaired and sharpened, for good sharp tools increase the efficiency and rapidity of labor and therefore decrease the cost.

Paint is a great preservative of tools and especially of wagons. To give them once a year a coat of paint well rubbed in is as good an investment as a farmer can make. His equipment will then not only look more respectable, but will last much longer.

Many fruit growers during the past season have experienced difficulty in obtaining packages for their fruit during the harvesting period. Strawberry crates and boxes are always scarce during the picking season. Apple barrels and grape baskets are just as difficult to obtain in the fall, and the demand for packages at these times causes the price to be higher.

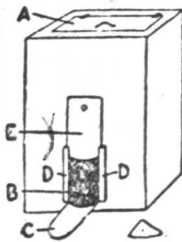

Why not eliminate vexation and expense by buying the packages "knocked down" or "in the flat" during the winter when the prices are more reasonable and the laborers may be profitably employed in making them up? One not only can save much by this procedure, but the packages will then be at hand ready for the harvesting. Berry crates and boxes may be made up and packed away for the spring. Grape baskets may be bought, and the handles may be nailed on at this time instead of in the fall. Apple boxes, if used for packing this fruit, may also be made up during these months and set away for the fall.

In some states the barrel is still the most popular package for apples. Within the last few years some of the growers with large orchards have solved the problem of winter work by installing a cooper's outfit and making up their own barrels during the winter. The material may be bought ready to assemble at a reasonable price, and the tools necessary for making the barrels may be procured at a slight cost. When proper storage facilities are at hand many fruit growers can save a good deal in this way, besides utilizing their employees during the winter. At times one might also contract to supply a neighbor with barrels, which would permit one to buy the material in larger quantities and make a little money on the contract, besides prolonging the winter's work.—Country Gentleman.

Convenient Grain Box.

Take a dry goods box, about fifteen inches deep, eighteen inches wide and two and a half feet long. Saw a rectangular hole in one end large enough to receive the grain and hinge a cover, A, over it. Next saw a hole about three feet by four inches in the front, B, making the bottom cut slightly rounded. Cut a piece of tin about three and one-half inches wide for a chute, C, curve it to fit the cut at the bottom of B and nail in place. Nail two small strips of wood, D, with a groove in the edge of each, to the box, so that a door, E, will slide up and down easily.

GRAIN BOX.

Make the door of a thin piece of board and round it at the bottom so as to fit snugly on the chute. By raising the door the grain will run out into a measure. Screw the box to the wall in the barn in a convenient place about three feet from the floor.—Farm and Fireside.

The farmer who toted flowers to his sweetheart in the courting days should not object to helping his wife weed the flower bed once in awhile.

English Earthquakes.

English earthquakes are not uncommon, but we can rejoice that they have decreased in severity, for the damage done nowadays is as nothing compared with the ravages wrought by early English earthquakes. In 1580, for instance, part of St. Paul's cathedral was wrecked by an earthquake shock, and at an earlier date Glastonbury abbey had been completely destroyed. Staffordshire, where the latest shock was felt, would appear to be the earthquake area of England, for shocks were also felt there in 1903. Even as recently as 1884, however, an English earthquake was severe enough to require a mansion house fund to repair its ravages in the eastern counties.—London Chronicle.

JUDGING A SEPARATOR.

Some of the Essential Things to Be Considered Before Making Purchase.

In an article of advice on separators A. W. Rudnick, assistant in dairying in the Kansas State Agricultural college, says:

In buying a separator the most essential points to be considered are: (1) The amount of milk to be separated, (2) the efficiency of the machine, (3) the life or durability of the machine, (4) the ease of cleaning the parts coming in contact with the milk, (5) the simple construction of and rigidity of the gears and pinions, (6) the oiling device, (7) the construction of casing or frame.

The efficiency of the machine is a very essential point. This does not refer alone as to whether the machine will skim clean when skimming a 25 per cent or 30 per cent cream, but if one must furnish a 40 per cent or 45 per cent cream will this machine skim cleaner than any other providing other requirements are equal? The separator, with care in keeping the temperature of the milk between 90 to 100 degrees F., having the machine on a solid foundation, the bowl running true and turning the crank at the required speed, should not have more than five-hundredths per cent of butter fat in the skim milk when skimming a 30 per cent cream.

The parts coming in contact with the milk should be heavily tinned, as this makes washing easier and prevents the parts from rusting. If the parts start rusting it is very tedious work to keep the machine clean. However, no separator is so constructed that it can be kept clean and sanitary without taking it apart after each separation. In order to get the best results from your machine wash and scald all the parts coming in contact with the milk after each separation.

Most of the standard machines have vertical and horizontal gears, with each end of the pinion in a bearing, thus reducing the chance of the gears moving out of place to a minimum, and this kind of gearing will run for years without any repair or adjustment if the machine can be easily oiled. The oil and dirt should be wiped off occasionally and the bearings flushed with coal oil. The oiling of a separator should be as automatic as possible. The splash system that is used on some of the separators makes the oiling automatic, requiring attention about once a week, and with an oil cup for the neck bearing we have the danger of the hot bearing reduced to a minimum. Although a series of oil cups with the snap lever proves very satisfactory, oil must be furnished the neck bearing either by means of a cup or a heavy oil pad, because the bowl travels at a tremendous speed and needs a constant bath of oil to prevent heating. The lower bearing of the spindle must also be so arranged as to be oiled constantly while the machine is in use. The other bearings must be provided for in some way or other and, as previously stated, as nearly automatic as possible.

While the construction of the casing or frame of the machine may look like a secondary problem, it really is very essential for two reasons: First, does it protect the operator from getting caught in the gears and chains? Second, is it so arranged that you can get at the gears and bearings easily to clean them occasionally and take out the old oil or, in case of overflow, milk?

Are Kidneys Fit to Eat.

We think not. It is the kidneys that abstract uric acid and other soluble impurities from the blood. The kidneys are often diseased, the tubes becoming inflamed and full of pus so that they fail to do their work and cause weakness and pain in the back and rheumatism, diabetes, puffiness under the eyes, follow. In such cases Merrill's System Tonic will be found invaluable. It contains buchu to soothe the inflammation and purifies the blood from the accumulated poisons. Old people and children need System Tonic to prevent too frequent urination, and to take away the burning sensation. All druggists sell Merrill's System Tonic. THE AMERICAN DISEASE.

Indigestion, Chronic and Acute, and the Digestive Organs.

Indigestion, a phase of dyspepsia which has been called the American disease, is very common, and its disagreeable symptoms are but too well known. Chronic indigestion, or dyspepsia, is very prevalent, and in medical phrase an acute disease is opposed to chronic in the sense that while a chronic disease runs a long time the acute form is attended with severe symptoms and is likely to come speedily to a crisis.

Acute indigestion, therefore, is a condition in which the digestive organs, because they are either naturally weak or are worn out, overworked or temporarily abused, fail to perform their functions and the whole system is thrown "out of gear." This may be due primarily and directly to overeating or to eating improper food, to gorging the stomach with inadequately masticated food, to retarding its normal action with too much liquid or to other local influences.

In cases of acute indigestion or dyspepsia there generally is intense pain, often followed by sickness and vomiting of the surplus or offensive matter by which the stomach seeks to correct the effects of abuse and regain a normal condition. But it does not always succeed. Other measures of relief also fail, the machinery breaks down, and death ensues.

The main difference between chronic dyspepsia and acute indigestion is that one is slow death and the other quick. The moral as to dietetic habits, eating and drinking, is too obvious to need pointing out.—Indianapolis News.

New York, April 16.—More than persons, it is feared, sank to death early yesterday, when four hours after she crashed iceberg the mammoth White Star steamer Titanic, bound Liverpool to New York on her voyage, went to the bottom Newfoundland Banks. Of the nearly 2,200 persons on board the liner, some of them of prominence, only 886 are thought to have been saved. The been a terrible loss of life.

Among the early estimates of the list as accurate, the dis-history of the world. Nearest approximation in magnitude were the losses to the steamer Atlantic, in 1856, when 574 lives were lost, and the Bourgogne, in 1898, with a list of 571. Should it prove that the liner, notably the Allan and Virginian, known to have been in the vicinity of the early yesterday, had picked up some of her passengers, the extra calamity would fortunately be reduced. This hope still exists of the sinking of the liner and the loss of life in consequence early last evening with greater shock, because hope was buoyed up all day by reports of the steamship, although maged, was not in a sinking position, and that all her passengers had been safely taken off. The reports were mostly unofficial, how-ship, but a lurking fear remained that the bad news would come.

Canadians Among Missing.

Toronto, April 16.—H. G. Thorley, Toronto agent of the White Star Line, received from W. W. Jeffries, the New York agent, a telegram advising that Captain Haddock of the Olympic reported that the Titanic foundered at about two o'clock yesterday morning.
The Carpathia has on board all the surviving passengers and crew, numbering 675. The Carpathia is steam-

Later in the evening Mr. Thorley received the following messages from Mr. Jeffries:

about two a.m. Monday. Carpathian has on board all surviving passengers

Shortly before midnight, Mr. Thor-ley received another message, reading as follows:

"Referring to previous telegram, earlier advices state that Parisian and Victorian have passengers on board, but have not yet received confirmation."

The news of the terrible disaster to the Titanic coming after the reassuring messages of the forenoon, which indicated that not only were the passengers saved, but that there was good prospects of towing the disabled leviathan into port at Halifax, came like a veritable bolt from the

BALFOUR ASSAILS BILL

He Calls Home Rule "Lopsided and Botched."

He Says He Does Not Think Any

Sane English or Scottish Members
Will Support the Proposals — It Would Not Be Fair to Burden Ireland With a Deficit of England's Making, Replies Samuel.

London, April 16.—Ex-Premier A. J.
Balfour resumed the debate in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon on the "Government of Ireland Bill" which was introduced in Parliament April 11 by Premier Asquith.

Mr. Balfour ridiculed the Government measure for Irish home rule, describing it as "unsymmetrical and botched federal scheme, utterly unworthy of British statesmanship."

"Was this lopsided scheme," the Opposition speaker asked, "imitating the architect of the great federal system beyond the seas?"

The alleged supremacy of the Imperial Parliament, Mr. Balfour declared yesterday in the House in condemning home rule, was about equivalent to the ancient claims of British sovereigns to be kings of France.

Mr. Balfour said that he did not believe that any sane English or Scottish members would support the insane proposals which divided the suggested federal system by customs barriers. If Ireland, he said, could use the customs to differentiate against foreign nations, the Government would find itself involved in appalling difficulties concerning the "most favored nation clause."

Mr. Balfour declared that, while other nations, including Germany and the United States and the British colonies, felt that if they were to hold their places in the world it must be by integration. Great Britain was to undergo a process of disintegration through the proposed lopsided federation.

Right Hon. H. L. Samuel, Postmaster-General, replying to Mr. Balfour yesterday, said that Mr. Balfour's arguments against the home rule bill might with equal justification be advanced against any scheme of colonial self-government.

Mr. Samuel, dealing with the subject of finance, declared it would be unjust in the first instance to burden
Ireland with the whole of the deficit.
The state of her finances was not her fault, but the result of English financial administration. Her revenue was paid on the Irish scale, while her expenditure was on the English scale, and it was therefore impossible, after accustoming the Irish to this scale of expenditure, to impose upon them
the burden of finding the whole expenditure.

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors but derived no benefit whatever.

Finally, I read an advertisement of 'Fruit-a-lives'. I decided to give 'Fruit-a-lives' a trial and found they did exactly what was claimed for them.

I have now taken 'Fruit-a-lives' for some months and find that they are the only remedy that does me good.

I have recommended 'Fruit-a-lives' to a great many of my friends and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly"

PAUL J. JONES

"Fruit-a-lives" is the only natural cure for Constipation and Stomach Trouble, because it is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices and valuable tonics. Hundreds of people have been cured, as if by a miracle, by taking "Fruit-a-lives", the famous fruit medicine.

The Shrewmouse.

The smallest mammal in the British Isle is the shrewmouse. This is not only the smallest British mammal, but, with the exception of one other of the same genus, the smallest in Europe. The harvest mouse is sometimes thought to be even smaller, but the length of its head and body is often two and one-half inches, while that of the lesser shrew is rarely more than two inches. The tail measures about one and one-third inches, and its teeth are so extremely small that a lens is required to detect them.

...two survivors of the disaster, according to the advices, Carpathia picked up, and is now way with them to New York. The rest of the crew as the Carpathia came up was one of desolation. All that remained of the $10,000,000 floating palace, on which 1,400 passengers had been voyaging luxuriously to this side of the Atlantic, were some bits of wreckage. The greatest ship in the world had gone down, snuffing out in her down-blow, it appeared, hundreds of human lives.

A significant line in the Cape Race dispatch was the announcement that the Carpathia near the wreck were women and children. It proved that no other vessel up any passengers of the sinker, this might mean that few men on board had been saved, proportion of women and children among the passengers was large. The same fact would likewise spell doom of practically the entire

The cabin were 260 women and children, but it is not known how many were among the 740 third-class passengers.

The first cabin there were 123 men and 15 children, and in the second cabin 79 women and 8 children.

A ray of hope appeared shortly before midnight last night in a message from New York from the operator of the Marconi wireless station at Cape Race, near the scene of the disaster. Answering an enquiry regarding the delivery of wireless messages to the passengers of the Titanic, the operator reported that it was difficult to deliver them, "as the passengers were believed to be dispersed among several vessels." Even this indication that other vessels besides the Carpathia had picked up survivors of the Titanic was eagerly seized upon by thousands of relatives and friends of those who had set sail for this country.

The survivors of the Titanic have gone through hardships, obscurity and peril which may affect many of them in a serious manner. A despatch announced at Cape Race late last night that those rescued by the Carpathia were picked up from a "small" lifeboat at 10.30 o'clock in the morning. It was eight hours that the Titanic is reported to have gone to the bottom.

The opinion of Vice-President Taft in the Carpathia will hasten the possible speed to make this known order that those survivors who worst from exposure may be able to obtain proper medical attention.

Confusion at the local offices, where information was studied as calmly as possible. Mr. Franklin figured, notwithstanding his fervent hope to the contrary, the Allan Line steamship and Parisian could have reached the scene of the disaster in time to have been of assistance.

When the Virginian first reported receipt of the "C.Q.D." signal it was not likely to be reached the Titanic before 10 in the morning. This hour has been nearly eight hours since the Titanic sank. It is equally likely that the Parisian could have reached the scene in time. The Titanic, with a length of 882 feet and a width of 92 feet

ter. Big Magnates on Board.
New York, April 16.—Wealth aggregating something like half a billion dollars was represented by ten of the passengers on the Titanic. If a calamity befell a few of these men it would materially affect the stock market, as well as vast business enterprises in the United States and England.
Foremost among the passengers in point of wealth was John Jacob Astor, who was returning to New York with his bride, formerly Miss Madeleine Force. Col. Astor's holding amount to fully $150,000,000, and he is connected with nearly a score of corporations. Next in financial importance come Benjamin Guggenheim, Alfred G. Vanderbilt and George D. Widener. Guggenheim represents American Smelting Securities Co., a great mining corporation. He is a member of a number of corporations.
Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt has never taken an active part in business affairs of the Vanderbilt family, having left that to his brother, Cornelius. Alfred is a member of numerous corporations, and his fortune is estimated at $75,000,000.
George D. Widener is connected with the Traction Syndicate of Philadelphia. His fortune is estimated at $50,000,000.
Col. Washington Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn Bridge, and director of John A. Roebling Sons Co. His fortune amounts to $25,000,000.
Bruce Ismay is probably worth $50,000,000. If the fortunes of all the first-class passengers were placed together they would make easily one billion dollars.
Notable persons, travelers on the Titanic, whose fate was in doubt in the lack of definite advices as to the identity of the survivors were Major Archibald Butt, aide to President Taft; Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific, his wife and daughter; W. T. Stead, F. D. Miller, the artist, Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus, Henry B. Harris, the theatrical manager, and Mrs. Harris, and Col. Washington Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn Bridge.

London, April 16.—Joe Martin received a negative answer in the Commons yesterday when he asked if the Attorney-General intended to prosecute Kipling for sedition for his verses entitled "Ulester," published last week.

Policeman Shot at Burglar.

Windsor, Ont., April 16.—The Windsor and L. S. Railway office at Kingsville was entered early Sunday morning. The burglar tried to crack the safe, but the charge only loosened the door.

The Kingsville night policeman fired at the yeggman, but the burglar escaped. Sunday night an attempt was made to rob two Windsor residences.

Curiosities.

On Monday Mr. John P. Nolan showed us some curiosities in the way of maple sugar. One piece was made by the late Jas. Burns, of Croydon, in 1874. Another piece in Mr. Nolan's possession was made in 1861. The sugar looks as good as ever despite being forty-five and fifty years old. Mr. Nolan also has a clay pipe which was the property of his grandfather, which is one hundred and thirty years old.

As both Mr. Brooks and his son are practical men in the business with extended experience, and have always adhered rigidly to the license laws, this new Napanee purchase will undoubtedly prove a great success. — Peterborough Times.

Now is the time to make arrangements for the setting out of plants, shrubs, and trees. The Horticultural Society will add ten or more ornamental trees to Harvey Warner Park, which is becoming more attractive every year. Orders will soon go forward for the flowering shrubs for the members of the Society. A united effort will be made by all our citizens to improve the appearance of their homes by cultivating more flowers and the Horticultural Society is the safest medium through which to carry on this important work. It should not be necessary to canvas for such a worthy cause, as the only object the Society has in view is to benefit its members and through them the town at large.

Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

The Annual Vestry Meeting of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Napanee, marked the conclusion of one of the most successful years in the history of this Church. The financial statements of the Wardens and of the various organizations of the Church, showed a healthy and progressive condition in all matters relating to the welfare of the parish. The Vicar appointed Mr. Herbert Daly as his Warden, and the congregation feel that in such good hands, the continued advancement of the Church is assured.
Mr. Edwin Checkley was appointed lay delegate to synod. The most pleasing feature of the meeting was the granting of a substantial bonus to the Vicar, in recognition of his untiring effort in ministering to the wants of the parish. This spontaneous act of a devoted and appreciative vestry, care as a great surprise to the Reverend gentleman, who was quite overcome with emotion when acknowledging this practical demonstration of the esteem in which he is held by the congregation. Dr. R. A. Leonard was elected peoples' warden.

BAYCENTRE.

The angel of death visited the home of Mr. John Sherman on Saturday morning last and bore away the spirit of his dearly beloved wife. The deceased had been ailing for some time but was able to be about until two weeks before her death. She was a great worker in the Presbyterian Church of which she was a member for a number of years, and will be greatly missed by her many friends. The funeral was largely attended on Sunday afternoon in Hay Bay Presbyterian Church, the service being conducted by Rev. Dr.
 Howard. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, including a very beautiful pillow of flowers from the Ladies' Aid, of which the deceased belonged. She leaves besides her sorrowing husband five sons and one daughter: James, of Gretna; Byron and Frank, of Kingston; Ward and Will at home, and Miss Elsie of Kingston. The whole community mourns her loss and sympathizes with the sorrowing husband and family.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA DESERONTO.

Spring is here for sure. This was evident to everyone who passed our park on Friday last and saw a game of baseball being played. Probably the most enthusiastic player was Mr.
 Whiting, Principal of our Public School.

Miss Marjorie Rathbun is in town, having come down from Toronto last week.

Mrs. F. S. Rathbun has returned to town from Toronto, where she has been spending the winter.

Those of our residents who remember Mr. Wm. Doxtater, who was formerly in the employ of the Rathbun Company in Deseronto, will regret to learn that while engaged at work at Point Ann handling iron, he had his hand badly smashed. He was at once taken to Belleville Hospital, where the injured member was dressed. The patient is now doing nicely. Mr.
 Doxtater seems to be somewhat unfortunate, as a little while ago he was laid aside for six weeks through illness, and had just nicely got back to work.
